

Faculty Position in International Business at Baruch College/ City University of New York

The Department of Marketing & International Business in the Zicklin School of Business of Baruch College (City University of New York) is seeking candidates for a full-time faculty position in International Business to start in Fall 2006. All ranks will be considered.

The candidate must have a Ph.D. in a field related to International Business. Beginning Assistant Professor candidates should have outstanding research potential, and more advanced candidates should have a substantial academic publication record in leading academic journals and evidence of a solid teaching record. More advanced candidates should also be well-known in the International Business community and have appropriate administrative experience so as to play a senior role in the growth of the International Business area. Salary is competitive.

The College is located in midtown Manhattan at the heart of one of the world's most dynamic entrepreneurial and cultural centers. The school's location provides ample opportunities for faculty to interact with practitioners from industry and with researchers at other business schools located in the New York area. Baruch College has the largest collegiate school of business in the nation, and has been ranked as the most diverse college in the United States, with students from across the wide spectrum of New York City's cosmopolitan population as well as from 148 other nations around the world. Total enrollment is over 15,000 students, including nearly 2,500 graduate students.

Prof. Andreas Grein will be attending the conference to interview candidates.
