

Assistant Professor, Associate Professor, or Professor

in Strategic Management

beginning in August 2006

The Georgetown University McDonough School of Business is looking for an individual who is a productive researcher and a superb teacher. We seek an individual with energy and initiative who is interested in collaborative relationships with colleagues at the School.

Research. We are interested in scholars whose research interests are complementary with those of the existing Strategy group. Our current research interests include the management of technology and knowledge-based approaches to the firm; industry development and evolution; international business strategy; entrepreneurship; firm organization and performance; and non-market strategy. Members of our group with a primary research and teaching interest in strategy are Paul Almeida, Rob Grant, Olga Khessina, Jeffrey Macher, Muir McPherson, Elaine Romanelli, and Bennet Zelner. Other group members include George Brenkert, Catherine Langlois, John Mayo, Stanley Nollen, Dennis Quinn and Ed Soule.

Teaching. Our programs include full-time week-day MBA, evening program MBA, Executive MBA, and undergraduate business administration. Our curriculum has courses in strategic management, global strategy, corporate strategy, technology strategy, capability-based strategy, international business, micro- and macro-economics, entrepreneurship, and specialized electives.

Location. Our location in Washington DC provides an exciting environment rich in opportunities for the study of business, with large numbers of corporate offices, industry associations, embassies, research institutes, the federal government, and international organizations such as the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

Academy of International Business in Quebec City. We will meet candidates at the Academy of International Business meeting in Quebec City, and expect to invite applicants for campus visits beginning in November 2005. Our representatives will be Professors Stanley Nollen (nollens@georgetown.edu, tel. 202 687 3826) and Bennet Zelner. Please contact Professor Nollen to arrange a meeting in Quebec City.

The closing date is February 1, 2006, or until the position is filled.

Our recruiting effort overall is being led by Professor Paul Almeida and Professor Jeff Macher. If you will not be at the AIB meeting in Quebec City, please contact Professor Almeida at almeidap@georgetown.edu or write to
