

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT

The Department of International Business at George Washington University (GW) may receive authorization to hire junior faculty to begin academic year 2009-10. We will be recruiting informally at the AIB annual conference in Milano.

Ours is one of the few freestanding International Business departments in the United States, with 14 full time faculty members. The department awards undergraduate, masters, and doctoral degrees, and has a diverse faculty and student body with respect to geographic origin and professional experience. We offer international courses in the functional areas of economics, finance, management, marketing, and strategy.

US News and World Report ranks GW's Undergraduate program in International Business in the top 20 in the USA in 2008. The Financial Times 2008 MBA survey ranks GW in the top five schools worldwide in International Business. GW also hosts a Center for International Business Education and Research (CIBER), providing extensive resources for international business research, teaching, and outreach on our campus and beyond.

Our location in the heart of the US capital, near the World Bank, International Monetary Fund, US central bank, and many embassies, is ideal for both students who wish to gain practical experience and faculty who wish to conduct academic research that has global implications. Please our website at www.ibusdept.com for additional information.

Professor Robert Weiner can meet interested faculty members and doctoral students at the AIB meetings. If you would like to schedule a time to meet with him, please send an email at ibu08gw@ibusdept.com prior to June 21, 2008. Please attach a copy of a current CV. Pending funding authorization we cannot accept packets, nor consider any formal candidacy.

George Washington University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.
