

Assistant / Associate Professor Position in International Business at Baruch College, the City University of New York

The Department of Marketing & International Business in the Zicklin School of Business, Baruch College, the City University of New York, is seeking candidates for a full-time faculty position in International Business to start in Fall 2009. The ranks of Assistant Professor and Associate Professor (without tenure) will be considered.

The candidate must have a Ph.D. in a field related to International Business. Beginning Assistant Professor candidates should have outstanding research potential, and more advanced candidates should have a substantial academic publication record in leading academic journals and evidence of a solid teaching record. Salary is competitive.

The Zicklin School is a leading publicly-funded School of Business located in the heart of New York City. The school's academic programs include BBA, MBA, MS and PhD degrees as well as executive programs in the United States and overseas. A wide range of course offerings in Marketing and International Business at the undergraduate and graduate levels allows for flexibility in teaching assignments.

The school's New York location enables it to draw on the vast economic and cultural resources of the city. It also provides opportunities for faculty to interact with practitioners from industry and with researchers at other business schools located in the New York area. The closing date for applications is September 1, 2008.
