Position Announcement: Baruch College, The City University of New York

The Aaronson Department of Marketing and International Business in the Zicklin School of Business, Baruch College (City University of New York), invites applications for two tenure track positions in International Business for Fall 2013. All ranks will be considered.

The candidate must have a Ph.D. in a field related to International Business. A beginning Assistant Professor candidate should have outstanding research potential, and more advanced candidates should have a substantial academic publication record in leading academic journals and evidence of a solid teaching record. Salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications.

The Zicklin School is a leading publicly-funded School of Business located in the heart of New York City. The school’s academic programs include BBA, MBA, MS and PhD degrees as well as executive programs in the United States and overseas. A newly created International Business undergraduate BBA degree coupled with an International Business MBA major provides for a wide range of course offerings and allows for considerable flexibility in teaching assignments.

The schools’ New York location enables it to draw on the vast economic and cultural resources of the City. It also provides opportunities for faculty to interact with practitioners from industry and with researchers at other business schools located in the New York area. Additionally, the Weissman Center of International Business supports a wide array of international programs, including speaker series, visiting scholars, study abroad, and academic research.

Please submit a cover letter, a copy of your vita, and a list of three potential references to initiate an application. The position will be open until filled, but applications received before August 20, 2012 will receive first attention.
