Loyola University Maryland's Sellinger School of Business and Management invites applicants for a tenure track position in the Management/International Business department for the 2013-14 academic year. Candidates must possess a doctorate (or be ABD) in international business or a related field from an AACSB accredited institution. This position will have primary teaching responsibilities in the international business area with a secondary interest in management/entrepreneurship.

Applicants must show evidence of, or potential for, excellence in teaching, a productive program of scholarly research, and commitment to service of the department, institution and discipline. Teaching load is expected to be 3/2 for the first 2 years moving to a 3/3 load thereafter. Research expectations include remaining AQ by the Sellinger definition of 2 peer reviewed journal articles plus points in a five year rolling window. Service includes, but is not limited to - academic advising, attending department meetings, & serving on university committees. Applicants must also show potential for engagement with and contribution to the Jesuit mission of the University.

The Joseph A. Sellinger, S.J., School of Business and Management at Loyola University Maryland is AACSB-accredited in business and accounting and offers undergraduate, graduate and Executive MBA programs. The university is ranked second among comprehensive universities in the Northern region by US News & World Report. Baltimore is rich in history and ethnic diversity and offers convenient access to Philadelphia and Washington D.C.

The University welcomes applicants from all backgrounds who can contribute to its educational mission. Loyola is an Equal Employment Opportunity Employer, seeking applications from underrepresented groups. Additional information is available at www.loyola.edu. To apply, please go to https://careers.loyola.edu to submit your credentials.